1. Molunat Peninsula is located west by northwest of Boka Kotorska and is a component of the defense system of the area.
2. An unspecified number of officers, noncommissioned officers, and soldiers, identified as artillery personnel, have been seen in Molunat. A good road leads from the port to the fortifications located on the mountain. All the fortifications are provided with guns, about which there are no available details. Molunat serves also as an observation station, and is equipped with instruments and signal devices.
3. Behind the fortifications, on the slopes of the mountain, there are several barracks housing troops. The total number of soldiers on the Peninsula is estimated at 400, which would be equal to the strength of an artillery battalion.
4. Behind the gun emplacements an underground fortification is located. It is provided with a Diesel motor which will furnish electric power to all installations; however, at the present time it supplies power only for the reflector which is located on the Peninsula.

Comment: According to information received 30 May 1950, new construction projects were begun on Molunat Peninsula in the early part of 1950 for the installation of bunkers for coastal artillery. According to another report, one battery comprising three Skoda 150-mm. cannons with a range of approximately 30 kilometers, and one cannon of 45-mm. caliber are located on the southeastern part of Molunat Peninsula. The battery is located in bunkers which have been built at 40 meters above sea level. Two underground tunnels containing munitions are located behind the batteries. The entrance to the tunnels is behind the battery emplacements. On the northwestern part of the Peninsula there are two barracks housing the crew stationed on the Peninsula. A water tank is located immediately behind the barracks. The barracks and gun emplacements are connected by means of a good road which leads to Plooice.
